Paper One: Personal Literacy Narrative

Over the past few days, we've seen and read several different kinds of literacy narratives. In this 500 – 700 word essay, you will be writing a literacy narrative of your own.

First, decide what kind of literacy you're going to discuss. Do you want to talk about first learning to read and write in your mother tongue? Or would you rather talk about your experience with a secondary literacy? Or would you rather focus on highlighting a single moment that illustrates your experiences or frustrations with a particular literacy? Remember, there are many different kinds of literacies that you can focus on: digital literacy, media literacy, political literacy, visual literacy, cultural literacy, and many others.

Next, decide how you're going to tell your story. Remember that a narrative is, first and foremost, a story, so determine the best way to get the point of your story across. If you need some step-by-step guidance in developing your narrative, please consult The Norton Field Guide to Writing's reference page for "Writing a Literacy Narrative":

http://www.wwnorton.com/college/english/write/fieldguide/writing_guides.asp

Consider some of the following questions as you develop your narrative: When, if ever, have you felt most motivated to read or write? What, if any, obstacles have you encountered as a reader and writer? What do you know about reading and writing? What do you know about yourself as a reader and a writer? Your goal here is both to vividly describe your experiences and to analyze why your experiences were significant.

Finally, we will be conducting an in-class peer review workshop to revise your work in progress. You will need to bring a substantial first draft (at least one full page) to class on workshop day and collect at least three peer responses to your draft on your Response Chart.

EXTRA CREDIT OPPORTUNITY:

If you make an appointment with a Writing Tutor at the Learning Resource Center in Airey Library and complete a Revision Agenda, you may turn it in with your Final Draft for 5 points extra credit on this paper.

Due Dates:
Thursday, September 11 th	Rough Draft DUE (3 copies for Workshop)
Tuesday, September 16 th	Final Draft DUE (Turn in with Response Chart and Optional Revision Agenda)